

Allowing passengers to use cell phones during plane flights is a terrible idea. I can assure you, there will be numerous angry confrontations between passengers who are trying to sleep (like me), and passengers who are gabbing loudly and incessantly on their cell phones about the latest article they just read in People magazine. In addition, if there is an actual emergency, passengers will be calling their friends and family instead of listening to the crew's instructions.